Lord Charles came to see our line after church and then joined us in class 😊
At the end of the interesting class about Vikings that Madam Danube gave, he was unfortunately deep asleep. But Brother Manolo and his colleague had joined us during class and we all went to visit the Monastery that Brother Hunter is building with Manolo. I forgot to take pictures of his extraordinary place called "inter-religion" he tries to represent most of known large religions and there are informations about them and it is breathtaking to see, in the middle of the many branches, Judaism and Christianity being just two little spots amongst so many others 😊
A lesson and when this pedagogic garden will be finished I will give the address here.

Lag occurs when GOd watches us and we are imperfect. Records must be made, correctional actions for GOd and the angles planned etc. When we are perfectly aligned, and follow GOd's plan, there is no lag.

We were a lot last night before the picnic Madam Danube mentionned and an even bigger line and Grandmaster was irritating and I told him. And class was really great. We made one quote that Billy carefully brought "Believe those who are seeking the truth; doubt those who find it"
We spent the all class on it because it led to very interesting thoughts. And Miss Hanna was brillant and very wise.
The all evening I was wondering what was this joke of His Majesty to look like a paper plane until someone told me it was my viewer 😊

I forgot to post these from Valentine's Day! Master Billy thought it would be fun as well as a good fundraiser to open a kissing booth at the school. Miss Anneke was first in line (of course) and got a polite kiss upon her hand. I was next and without even being asked what kind of kiss I wanted, I was all but swept off my feet!!! Today Grand Master was keen about our line, he never said we had a good line but said I was a 'hero' for how straight I was standing. Needless to say I was ecstatic. Then miss Lucie called for a gym class and guess who hid and ran away because they thought the water was going to be too cold? Then... a jog to warm us up, a swim to cool us down, an exploration of a deserted island. I was hoping we would stay longer to dig for treasure but we were off again in another instant and soon we were back safe at home getting ready for evening soup and a deep Catholic slumber to follow.

As miss Sarah just showed, we had a pretty line, and then a long class and then soup. A perfectly banal evening. The Banalists were a small group of artists in Czechoslovakia, uniting regularly, not too often but not too rarely, at for example a phone booth near a bus stop to say nothing special and enjoy the lack of particularity of the moment. I am a fan of Banalist movement personally. It seems to have disappeared with the Eastern block. I cannot find anything relevant on the internet about it, it is rare to reach the limits of the internet 😊 Rare is bad for the banalists. I hope they don't know they are rare. Or maybe they stopped because they were always rare and they found "rare" much less banal that they would have liked. Something didn't work out.

Yesterday was the strangest day at Columba that I can ever remember. The triangle forces were in flux as there were definite extreme shifts happening and we were witnesses to it all! It started with seeing a CAT disguised as a MAN riding a HORSE! (Then later... an EXCELLENCE disguised as an 8 year old GIRL riding a CAT!) Then miss Anneke got into the mushroom closet and decided to become 11/12-ish (See new height below). Then people were floating/walking on air or underground, excellence's on motor scooters. It was utter chaos.

Indeed Madam Lecker we were many in church. I wonder if my dream of two full pews will ever happen.

The line was all right and I like our new socks.

Then we started Gym and I must say I was starting to get more and more aggressive at the negative attitudes around. Teddy bears, Boxing gloves, disobedience, random uniformity.....grrr

I can't make myself be respected if you are not here Miss Sarah and Madam Lecker.

For the swim we ended 3 of us, Angelina was scared of depths, Ellie got lost, and Heidi drowned. RIP Heidi.

Oh and I found a Chewing Gum distributor in the dormitory can you imagine? I destroyed it of course. The machine and the content. And we will have to find who's mischief was this. I bet it was Heidi. Rest In Gum Heidi.

Sarah Sandalwood Horten Admin

Miss Lucie, I am so sorry to hear of all those issues! If you could, please send me a list of infractions so I might add those to their records. Negative attitudes are UNACCEPTABLE and so is drowning! While I am sorry to hear of Miss Heidi's passing, I am sure she was somehow responsible for her own demise. I feel for Miss Angie as I too have suffered from the fears of depth and height. And Miss Ellie getting lost seems about right considering her length of time with us has not been terribly long. Ohare's is a large geographical area and it took me months to know where I am.

The bubblegum cartel is something I have been investigating for months and I was so close to cracking the case!!! It's a bit upsetting that you have gotten involved and have now blown my many months undercover work. However, I also concluded that Miss Heidi was the kingpin behind the operation but now we may never know!

It was a very nice class yesterday, homework were brilliant. And well... embarrassing for me. I was chosen as an exemplary woman by Miss Sarah and mentioned as such by Billy. I have been blushing so much that I might stay red for ever.

And I find myself so much not exemplary since months.

But it was a good way to motivate me to deserve this.

It makes me want to finally update the uniform dispenser, review the rules, clean the abbey everyday, and ask the permission to talk and be more obedient. I feel particularly ashamed of myself for my recent behavior and lack of focus after being considered so valuable, unfairly in my view.

I also want to talk to Madam Lecker who I have apparently upset with my careless talks. I hope to see you tonight Madam, and please forgive me. See less

We gave a nice service even if I didn't have the time to prepare a special one for Easter Monday. After that we made a nice line in our pretty dresses except for Miss Angelina who hadn't it prepared, we will see to that as soon as we can Miss Angelina. Then Claude arrived with long hair. It made us laugh so much. He decided that he was the wife and I was the husband so by obedience to my husband I dressed as a boy and then we did some acrobatics. Then I had to change back quickly because Miss Sarah was writing things in her tick book, and we went to the zoo.

Tonight at the abbey, there was a celebration of life for Friar Chim. It was very heartwarming and emotional. Chim seems to have enjoyed it very much. He is very very sick and his friends wanted to pay homage to him for his years of service to St. Columba Abbey.

But well I didn't find this line was worst than another one.

In class we talked about a king who killed his wives one after the other. What a strange thing to do. Henry... Maybe he had told them secrets and changed his mind.... Or maybe he just liked to kill them, as a hobby... Or maybe he was bad in bed and was afraid they would say it to everyone? Well for sure that seemed to be a very bad person. Well this was a wonderful evening for me, it was so lovely to visit my former school 😊 after a while I decided to line up and I didn't lose how to do it at all in all this time. There were three visitors we were very talkative they were nice, just listening and enjoying us. after the brilliant doctor Pearl, so nice to meet him, had to go, I took the children to bed did the bed time as I was used to at the time and kissed them good night. I lovely evening, and so lovely kids.

Lucie was here when I arrived. Things are not how they used to be with her. She was not attending anything she was standing in line like if everyone was her equals. You should really be careful to not forget that she is here to serve everyone. At my time we loved her yes, but we didn't let her be at ease with us. It was an important rule of the school, as hierarchy is an important part of discipline, it goes both ways. But I sent her to her broom and there was no problem of course.

After church we had our first Catechism with Sir David.

After that we had a long conversation about having a transvestite teacher in a catholic school and it makes me struggle between being honest human and open minded, hence having a good teacher who is a transvestite, or being more what we are supposed to be, tradition before all, no gay, no transvestite, etc...

Both points make sense.

Actually I have been fighting so much these last months against people detaining the truth about what is right or wrong, that my puppeteer is pulling me in her camp of modern tolerance. Indeed how can I consider the people of Lepanto who banned me because I ask too many questions, dark and against the message of Jesus Christ, if I refuse a competent teacher because of his sexual orientations?

I don't want to be like these people. Or if I am, then I will want that we are forbidden to think freely, re-integrate corporal punishment, and be as unjust and arbitrary as possible, for the meaning of this play.

This is not where our school has been going since we are in O'hare's gap. I think that I should stop taking decision as I make people leave us, for example Miss Secret who cannot stand my views on the bible because she doesn't consider it a book, but the word of God..... and then if our book is the word of God for me it means that other religions are wrong. Logic, and of course totally wrong.

I want to stop taking decisions because I am not a blind believer and if I am catholic and feel catholic for real, it will never be a truth to me, but just a cultural way of comprehending life and the world. Jesus Christ, if moralizing, always defended the honest, the plain, the simple and the humble. And if he is my guide, it is also because I think he would accept a transvestite and shout against the fascist and the simplified truth. Good is inside and not a social code. I also think that when Jesus hammers people about "belief", it is a metaphor. Belief being faith, and faith being joy, strength, courage, and love for the creation in all its DIVERSITY!

I am just the attendant. I did create this school, but I don't feel it belongs to me. I am not saying that I don't recognize myself in it. At the contrary. But I am just saying that my time is passed and that I wish to give the decision power to the wonderful youth of our school, who I want to serve humbly with all my affection.

Sarah Sandalwood Horten Admin

Miss Lucie, after reading your heartfelt post, I sat for quite some time pondering a response. It is true that the school has gone through several iterations but I cannot account for any of them prior to this one. And indeed, it went through much transformation to fit into the community of O'Hares. But what has been the one constant?? YOU! YOU are the reason we are here! And I am certain your character has gone through as much transformation as the school itself.

As I mentioned at the dinner table last night, 8 year old me is an identical reflection of my "slightly older" puppeteer. Her RL thoughts and feelings are almost impossible to hide from my lips but at times I have to remind her of the world I live in. Quite often she starts to say something and I have to kick her in the shin because it's not what "I" should think. It stinks not having a mind of my own sometimes!

You are conflicted in the same way by your puppeteer and rightfully so. We do call ourselves a Catholic school and should do our best to live by the code of conduct. My puppeteer is not Catholic and disagrees with so many beliefs that it often makes her cringe when I tell her "I CAN'T SAY THAT!" But for some strange reason, she enjoys being here! Trust me...the day she told me to put a uniform on, was the day of our single biggest argument! I was like "REALLY!? CATHOLIC SCHOOL!?!? SERIOUSLY!?!?"

I'm just a Disney loving kid and that was my entire world, but she told me this would be good for me. And she was right! And what I do love about it is that we are tolerant on so many subjects. If we were 100% strict on Catholic law, I don't believe she would keep me here. I know that sounds funny coming from "ME" being my role is "RULES ARE THE MOST IMPORTANT THING". Yet you will find that I enforce the school rules, not the Catholic ones. My draw to this school is the school itself, not the Catholic faith.

Like my puppeteer, I am indeed a Christian and a true believer in Jesus and take religion seriously. And like you, I believe Jesus is very tolerant of everyone. Our services are not Catholic. Father Eissmann does not actually hold a "mass" but rather an ecumenical service for everyone. And so our school follows closely to those guidelines. Maybe we should become "St. Columba Christian Boarding School".

Being a religious school in SL carries a stigma regardless who we are. Being Catholic seems to make that even worse in the eyes of the "watchdogs" and "guardians of the grid". I lost family because I "became one of THEM!!" But I love and adore "THEM!!" St. Columba is my home and my friends. It is now an integrated part of O'hare's Gap and those that remained in the community have shown tolerance in us. This is a topic that certainly warrants more group discussion.

Dear Mrs Rose, Dear miss Sarah

Thank you for your kind letters and the sincere reflections therein. As Mrs Rose points out, it was easier in the old days: Our school simply followed the 2586 rules in the Catholic Catechism - and then we added a few rules about practicalities, such as who could sit in the chairs in the draughting room when and how was corporal punishment to be administered by whom. Those were easy days with little need for reflection. I could read for Mrs Rose from rule 2523: "Modesty inspires a way of life which makes it possible to resist the allurements of fashion and the pressures of prevailing ideologies." and she would look at me with affection. I could go on and read from rule 2525 "Purity of heart brings freedom from widespread eroticism and avoids entertainment inclined to voyeurism and illusion." and she would look puzzled as the word "eroticism" did not mean anything for her, before she met Mr Rose.

As you may know, miss Sarah, I was expelled from the school for my grave misbehaviour and then spent the similar of 40 years in Siberia, where I was trying to convert the Yakutians to Catholicism. I mention this, not because I became a Shaman there, but because the shamans frequently are transvestites. A trans-priest is therefore fully in line with my vision of a more shamanistic church and school. But there is more: St Columba was a shaman, you can read about this in Vita Columbae, the second book, where he performs various miracles such as healing people with diseases, expelling malignant spirits, getting spilt milk back in the bucket, subduing wild beasts, calming storms, and even returning the dead to life. In my vision of our school, the good forces are more fierce, the trans-priest drives the demons out, carefully following catholic liturgy so none are offended, and the shamans follows the teaching of St Columba, and we show love and tolerance to all we meet and warmly include those who join our ranks and especially those that wear woolen stockings.

The puppeteers should never interfere. Mine is a grumpy old atheist, that supports Marx' view that "Religion is the sigh of the oppressed creature, the heart of a heartless world, and the soul of soulless conditions. It is the opium of the people". If my puppeteer ever got his hands on me, he would lock me up and force to eat magical mushrooms till I became a Disney figure in miss Sarah's kingdom. But he also fully supports Mrs Rose's view on "joy, strength, courage, and love for the creation in all its DIVERSITY". We should have that as a device over our door.

I was present, Mrs Rose, when you in your madness moved us to O'Hares Gap, and when you even more madly reconsidered us running away. Thus we met miss Sarah, and as she heartfully admits "St. Columba is my home and my friends. It is now an integrated part of O'hare's Gap and those that remained in the community have shown tolerance in us."

That word is important - we must show tolerance - we do not need to respect others, not even our puppeteers - but we must show, in alphabetical order:

* Love

* Tolerance

and never stop improving.

With kind affection, I remain yours

Dr Pearl, shaman (Catholic).

When i attended ST. Columba's i had the impression it was a traditional catholic school. Hence the uniforms and the chain of commands. Thats why as long as i am member, i am the girl that belongs in such a school, being traditional catholic too. So thats why i reacted the way i did concerning master David being a cross-dresser and a gay. In a modern school it wouldnt be a problem, even my puppeteer doesnt see it as a problem, and yes, she is a catholic. But in a traditional catholic school, i dont think its right. Anyway, I leave it to you to make a descision about it. But I will not attend the classes. I will keep coming to the school as such, I love it to much to even concider leaving. Besides. My boyfriend is there too 😊

I understand your point miss, and I am precisely struggling between the funny conservatism and the more real open mind and acceptance of modernity. I feel that in the place we are, we just have the duty to be generous, open minded and daring. Especially nowadays with all this populist racism, xenophobia, conformism and nervous reaction-ism all around. Also we have a pope who likes humans now. So it makes sense that our religious orphanage adapts to her new pope 😊 oh is not pro gay of course, he cannot. But he is not condemning it with the same absolute as his forbearers. We can be in a strict old fashion education system, while being kind, loving and open to all, and give refuge to a person who is a good teacher but will not be tolerated in other churches. I am proud to be part of the school who would want to add "sexual difference" to the good morals 😊 It makes sense Miss Anneke it totally does, and it is not so unrealistic. I hope we can talk more about it and that you could consider changing your mind and see it differently. Catholic boarding schools and orphanages are not necessarily dark and sectarian. It can be strict, humble but loving. And if Loving, consider Sir David as a refugee, escaping the gay hunt. This is what Christians are here for.

And about the confession, again I agree with you. But we have no one. It is supposed to be forbidden because it is a sacrament. That is why it is so difficult to find a person being a priest who is not a pervert but relaxed enough to play the game. I know one but he is in Saint Elizabeth. And by the way they do communion there. which is lovely honestly. But forbidden..... *sighs. I wish we were more free.

Today was quite interesting. First miss Heidi showed up which almost never happens. She was out of uniform, which almost always happens. A fight broke out later between miss Amy and miss Anneke. The air was so tense it was nerve wracking. And all over a simple misunderstanding. (i.e. Miss Sarah not communicating all the facts)

Parrying is crucial. Before I learned how-to, I got a thumbnail broken by a sword blow just during training. In turn I had to stab my opponent in his shoulder, of course gentlemanly, to show that I had not been wounded seriously. It was much more polite to get shame on me for wounding him, than let him be ashamed for wounding me.

Well first, photos of us in church is not the most original thing, it has been done before a few thousands times. But I made composition experiments and a full pew+ should always be documented, at least until the day it will be everyday and that we will document two full pews+ 😊 Then I think there have been one or two photos of us lining up.... I think... not sure. But again, one shows the nicely ominous lighthouse behind with a surreal sky, that I like and second shows Miss Carmela! our new future comrade who is a very very nice girl and I really hope she stays with us. no shadows on this one because with the shadows I was too slow to type and could not participate in the ongoing intense conversations. Then we had a wonderful encounter with this Sir and Madam who were exceptionally nice and who seemed to appreciate us and that makes me so proud always, when people see how wonderful we can be.

Then my class, i was not in the mood, but comrades made it a wonderful class. How is it that everyone is so wonderful in this school? how is it that I have never met that anywhere else? that everyone has something to say and elevate a small quote to great wisdom? it sometimes makes me nearly cry 😊 Miss Angie was at the toilets when I took this pick but she was here and she also worked on the quote as eagerly and interestingly as everyone. Everyone has a A+, except me today.

Then the soup and a photo taken of Miss Carmela so that you recognize her next time you see her.

Lucie Rose
Miss Carmela is from Indonesia and lives in the UK. She is catholic and gave her application form properly filled.

I would say simply you took this picture a fraction of a second before the others stood up at the end of class? but one thing is most strange. how is it that you could take this picture while you are not on it? I mean in our puppeteer's world it would be logical, but in our dimension we have very long arms to take the group of people we are with. and if you were here you should be at your desk obviously. The fact that you are the photographer is the strangest thing Master Billy Auster

/me approacheds the podium...looks out at the audience blinded by the bright focused spotlight that shines directly upon her. She takes a sip of water and dabs a perfectly folded white handkercheif across the sweat upon her forehead. After a deep breath and one additional swallow, she begins..."To all my fellow comrades, superiors, teachers and cats at St. Columba Catholic Boarding School and Orphanage, I wish to decree that I, Sarah Anne Sandalwood, proud Excellence of your wonderful educational institution, am indeed
NOT perfect."

She pauses for another sip of cool water while the audience lets out a collective *GASP*. She waits for the muttering to settle down and then continues..."It may be hard to imagine,
but I am only 8 years old and at times,
I find myself in a whirlwind of issues and problems. While my mental filing cabinet works hard to keep our entire world organized, at times, and only on RARE occassions, something gets misfiled."

A chuckle comes from the audience and she peers through the bright lamp to note Master Billy with his hand cupped over his mouth. Taking note but saying nothing, she moves on..."Though I may have had intentions of completing the assignment as I have every assignment before, I was heavily engaged in getting the school paper together and before I knew it, I had exhausted all my time." She glances over offstage and sees Brandelyn's kind and forgiving face and suddenlt feels less guilt.

"Let it be known that though I indeed recieved a tick mark, I say those who live in glass houses should not cast thy first stone!" as she holds the tickmark book high in the air. The silence in the auditorium is remarkable...not a sound is heard. A soft meow comes from Brandelyn's direction.

She lowers the book and with a solemn expression upon her face says
"It is no excuse. I have not slept in days. I have cried to myself when alone. I have approached the alter in search of forgiveness. There are few words to describe the personal heck I have been living in since this faithful day!" She takes one final dab of the cloth and concludes..."All I can do is ask your forgiveness. I cannot promise you perfection nor can I guarantee that it will never happen again. But have it in your hearts to to understand that everything I do, I do it for YOU!!"

She walks away from the podium and wraps her arms around Brandelyn as she sobs into her thick, deep fur.

Miss Linia Love Wallace, Good day Miss by the way, I am Lucie and have no idea who you are or who's friend you are and if we ever met in the world there, where our school is but I cursty to you Miss. The Rosary is indeed a thing made to empty one's mind. It consists in repeating a list of prayers brainlessly. it is an act of contrition but also of trance. like ironing can be Miss if you like ironing like I do. With the difference that the muscles you brainlessly use for rosary, is your brain precisely, so you cannot think of anything else than God, presumably, bu honestly more about abstract shapes or at best, reach the nothing of thoughts. The nothing is perfect Miss. it is very hard to achieve. that is why the Rosary has been invented. all this is an opinion Miss and maybe that some would find it sacrilege to see it this way, it happens to me all the time to say the wrong thing about God and Church Miss i am used to it.

I will return shortly to oversee the use of mushrooms. It is very DANGEROUS if handled wrongly. Mrs Rose will remember the grave situation we had when they were combined with the Eucharistic field and created a number of very small students that then were eaten by a passing cat. Now, I am reluctant to point out Brandelyn's presence, but we are only a few centimeters away from creating a "hmmm - a snack " situation. Madamiss Tessa - beware!

Everyone tasting Dr. Pearl's mushrooms....Curiosity got the best of me and I tried the pink one. One of the scariest things I ever did! Now I hope the blue one work the opposite way!! 😬

Anneke van Trijp

NEVER, I REPEAT NEVER DO THAT WITHOUT DR. PEARL'S CONSULT!!!!

Tonight, Billy took over class to tell us of Shamus McShamus' buried treasure off of O'Hare's Gap! We suited up and not only went exploring...but we FOUND the gosh darn thing!!! Now we are deciding on how to spend it and on what!!

Sorry Madam Danube....at the scare of it being "cursed" by pirates, we ended up returning it to the sea so the ghosts wouldn't come after us!

Miss Sarah doing inspection before bedtime prayers. I was sweating bullets 'cause I had been digging in the dirt earlier for buried treasure.

Of course! We were all scared! Miss Sarah had her tickmark book at the ready should we falter in the slightest! (I don't know for sure if master Noah got away with his little wardrobe malfunction or not though ) Grandmaster is getting old. He started to sleep at inspection, but Master Noah revived him with an oil can.
